

Substance abuse during pregnancy can cause serious health problems for newborn babies as well as for mothers. These figures illustrate the increased rate of newborns' and mothers' hospital stays related to substance use between 2006 and 2012, as well as the trend toward more opiate use among pregnant women.

Drug Use-Related Hospital Stays Rising for Mothers, Newborns

Mother Hospital Stays Rise For Opiates, Drop for Cocaine

Newborns Exposed to Drugs Have Higher Complication Rates

